(Atlanta, GA) - June 12, 2009- Some might say the word, 'transparent' is another cliché that has been used almost as much as 'change' in the past few years. For one firm, transparency and service go hand in hand. This week, Redmond Law, LLC was announced as an approved attorney for the Atlanta Development Authority's (ADA) URFA Home Atlanta programs. For consideration, law firms must submit firm credentials and experience as well as display the financial health of the firm by opening their books and providing their financial statements.

"Due to your track record, as well as your experience in this affordable housing arena, the evaluation team has selected Redmond Law, LLC to work with URFA to continue our mission," said Clyde Anderson, frequent CNN guest and Single Family Manager for Atlanta Development Authority.

There are several down payment assistance programs housed through the ADA's URFA Home Atlanta program. In an effort to revitalize the city, URFA Home Atlanta programs provide up to $50,000 for buyers purchasing units in certain tax districts.

"Being added to this list is a testament to our quality of service and sound financial practices," said Redmond Law, LLC Managing Partner, Mabelle Redmond. "Our firm works with residential buyers and sellers at several price points. We appreciate the opportunity to work with the ADA to provide their homebuyers with a first-class closing process from start to finish."

Redmond Law, located at 3575 Piedmont Road in Buckhead, is a full service real estate law firm founded by University of Georgia and Georgia State University alumna, Mabelle Redmond. The firm also houses a real estate school, Redmond Real Estate Institute, offering continuing education to realtors.
